

Systems planning of cities

Driving innovation and accelerating change

Dr. Peter Stigson, Director Research & Business Development

RISE Research Institutes of Sweden AB

- For every complex problem there is a solution that is simple, direct and wrong...
- ...and all changes in large systems creates both winners and losers.
- Systems solutions are needed for sustainable cities

The opposite of silos...

Great minds think together

Access to excellence, testbeds and technology at RISE

AI and Data Science

Blue growth

Built environment

Circular transition

Digital security

Energy

Health

Innovation systems

Component manufacturing

Foodtech

Materials

Process
manufacturing

Risk, safety and resilience

Service research and digitalisation of processes

Transport and mobility

Transport systems

Partnership for innovation

Broad collaboration for innovative system solutions

Co-creation hubs to erase silos and corporate borders

Find a neutral and independent guide in this process

SICKLA 2030

Sickla – the basics

1 owner

150 000 m²

present - 2035

Implementing sustainability

Goals and measuring – context specific

Collaborations – SGID and RISE among others

Innovation Hub – an idea driven city

Systems demonstrator – not only a test bed

Financial sector – as a catalyst and commitment

Stockholm
Green Innovation
District

Thank you!

peter.stigson@ri.se